FROM THE CHAIRMAN'S DESK . . .

Dear Grand Rapids Community:

Your kind support to the Jewish Federation of Grand Rapids is deeply appreciated. We are aware that you have many choices where to donate your charitable dollars. The fact that you make your gift to Federation means that you believe in the vital work that we do and you care about the core Jewish values of Tikkun Olam (repairing the world) and Tzedakah (righteous philanthropy).

Your gift helps sustain our local Jewish programming for all segments of our community, from moms and tots, to youth and Birthright Israel trips, to our young adults and seniors. Through your generosity, we support the United Jewish School, Food Bank, Chabad House and Shabbat Meals program, Jewish Theatre, Shir Shalom Choir, and area Hillels.

In addition, your gift reaches needy Jews in 60 countries around the world through the Joint Distribution Committee (JDC) and the Jewish Agency for Israel (JAFI).

Since 1987, we have helped resettle one million new immigrants to Israel, and we are taking care of small Jewish communities in Cuba and several other countries.

Our UJC system generated over $28 million to provide a tremendous support to the victims of Hurricane Katrina! And we will continue to respond to any and all crisis situations, which require emergency relief. Together we have raised more than $70 million in Operation Promise to rescue and resettle the Ethiopian Jewish community to a new life in Israel.

We want you to know that you, our donors, remain full partners in our local and global agenda, and it is so reassuring to know that we can count on your support.

As our campaign is so vital and to support the growing needs of our Jewish community, both locally and around the world, I am asking that the community support the 2008 campaign with an increase of 10% over last year's giving.

I am pleased to announce that Andrew Samrick will be our 2008 campaign chairman. Andrew is the next generation from a family that has been so supportive of our community and truly champions of Tikkun Olam. Please join Andrew and support him in making our Israel@60 campaign a proud achievement for all of us.

On behalf of all the recipients of your generosity, we say thank you.

Live generously and give with pride.

Sincerely,
Dan Hurwitz

JEWISH AGENCY IN ACTION SAFE SUMMER CAMPS FOR SDEROT'S CHILDREN

July 28, 2008 / 25 Tammuz 5768

"Many of the Sderot children I spoke to had never before met an American Jew," recounted Jordan Sherman, who served as a volunteer counselor at a Jewish Agency summer camp for Sderot children in July. "I think our most important contribution to the camp was that our very presence conveyed the message that even though American Jewry is far away, we care about them and feel for them."

Sherman was one of 22 young U.S. Jewish volunteers from federations throughout North America who assisted at Jewish Agency summer camps which have already served some 10,000 children aged 6 to 17 living in the besieged western Negev city and the surrounding Gaza perimeter communities.

The Jewish Agency, with funding from the Israel Emergency Campaign (IEC) of the United Jewish Communities and Jewish Federations of North America, has been taking the entire population of children who live in the Sderot region out of the range of missile attack for part of the summer. From amusement parks to nature reserves, from water parks to concerts, and from touring the country to enjoying recreation with friends, the kids from Sderot are having a great and safe summer.

Sherman, 22, who has just graduated from the University of Michigan Business School, and hails from Bloomfield Hills, Michigan, was one of a group of volunteers in the Negev sent by the Jewish Federation of Metropolitan Detroit to serve as counselors at the summer camps.

In Israel for the third time, he volunteered at a Science Summer Camp for fourth to seventh graders at the Jewish Agency's Youth Aliyah Nitzana village on the Israel-Egyptian border, in the Negev.

Sherman recalls that for much of the time the anxiety of living under a constant barrage of missiles from Gaza was forgotten by the Sderot children, as they focused on having fun. "But I remember a few times we heard some distant booming," says Sherman. "It was just the Israeli army training in nearby bases. But suddenly the kids stopped smiling and asked nervously if Kassam rockets were falling."

Daniel Langus, 22, from Chappaqua in Westchester County, New York, who recently graduated in Economics from the University of Michigan, also volunteered as a counselor at the Nitzana camp. "We helped organize events in the camp which had lots of fascinating activities about solar energy and astronomy," he says.

"The rest of the time we swam with the kids and played baseball, soccer and other sports with them," he added. "I think the most chilling thing was the way they accept the situation in Sderot. The only life they have ever known is one in which missiles are falling almost every day."

Langus had never been to Israel until he came on a Birthright

Israel trip in June. He liked the country so much he wanted to return for the summer. "I've worked as a counselor in U.S. camps, and so when I heard from the federation about the Jewish Agency volunteer program, I jumped at the chance. Being here has really strengthened my Jewish identity."

Sherman says that he has always had a very strong Jewish identity. "For me, volunteering to help the kids of Sderot has been an opportunity to give back to the Jewish people, who have given me so much."

See what's happening daily at the Sderot summer camp blog.

The summer camp project for Sderot area youth is funded by the Israel Emergency Campaign (IEC) of the United Jewish Communities and Jewish Federations across North America, the communities of Keren Hayesod, UIA – Canada, the UJA Federation of Greater Toronto, Federation/CJA of Montreal, the Jewish United Fund/Jewish Federation of Metropolitan Chicago, the Jewish Federation of Metropolitan Detroit, the Greater Miami Jewish Federation, the Jewish Community Federation of Cleveland, the UJA-Federation of New York, the ASSOCIATED: Jewish Community Federation of Baltimore, and Israeli donors.

This year to date: 550 New Immigrants Arrive to Israel from South Africa and France

Chairman of the Jewish Agency Zeev Bielski with new immigrants from South Africa at the Western Wall.

July 28, 2008 / 25 Tammuz, 5768

The number of immigrants to Israel from South Africa is expected to nearly double this year, as 100 olim arrived in Israel Monday (July 21). They traveled on the first chartered flight for immigrants from South Africa, organized by the Jewish Agency and the South African Zionist Federation. Jewish Agency Chairman Zeev Bielski and Minister of Immigrant Absorption Eli Aflalo greeted the group at a special welcoming ceremony Tuesday at the Western Wall in Jerusalem.

Since the middle of 2007, South African Jews have expressed increased interest in aliyah, resulting in part from growing political instability and rising levels of violence and crime in the country.

The number of people contacting Jewish Agency representatives in South Africa with requests to open aliyah files or with questions about aliyah has increased significantly over the last year. The Jewish Agency estimates that more than 300 South African Jews will make aliyah this year, up from 178 in 2007.

New immigrants from France arrive in Israel.

Meanwhile, the influx of French immigrants remains steady, with 450 newcomers arriving in Israel Wednesday (July 23) on three special flights, organized by the Jewish Agency and the French organization AMI. Jewish Agency Chairman Zeev Bielski and Minister of Immigrant Absorption Eli Aflalo were at Ben Gurion Airport to greet the newcomers. France, with a population of some half a million Jews, the largest Jewish population outside Israel and the United States, has seen nearly 20,000 Jews immigrate to Israel since 2000; and the numbers are expected to remain steady at up to 3,000 olim per year.

"The arrival of hundreds of new immigrants is a real celebration for the Jewish People and the State of Israel," said Chairman of the Jewish Agency Zeev Bielski. "The Jewish Agency will continue to develop new programs to promote aliyah from the West and assist in the absorption of these immigrants in Israel."

OUR ISRAEL: Ziva and Getachew

Ziva Casay understands the many Ethiopian immigrants she mentors at the UJC/Federation-supported Be'er Sheva Kalisher Absorption Center, a JAFI facility. Ziva made aliyah from Ethiopia in 1980 and knows how challenging adapting to a new home can be, so she and the staff work hard to build a strong community for the children there. She has grown particularly close to one boy named Getachew, who was recently orphaned when his mother died after a sudden illness.

"It was a huge shock to everyone," Ziva said. "If something happens -- someone falls or gets injured -- everyone is there to pick them up. Everyone is united here. We are all family. We are a community."

Ziva encourages the children to communicate more. "It can help if they talk about whatever bothers them, whatever they feel -- their successes or their failures. If they know how to talk, they'll be able to connect." Ziva said. "We need to help them and then they can spread their wings and fly."

Thanks to guidance and support from Ziva and others at Kalisher, Getachew is excelling in school and hopes to become a pilot in the Israeli Air Force.

Join us in Israel at the 2008 UJC General Assembly this Nov. 16-19 as we travel north to south to see how our system helps recent Israeli immigrants like Getachew and so many others.

Don't miss this historic event – register for the GA, JAFI Assembly, and more than 40 federation missions. Register now – due to high demand, the Sept. 1 deadline for hotels has been moved up and hotels will only be available on a first-come, first-served basis.
