Jewop Represents UW at National A Cappella Competition

By Madison Knobloch (UW 2019) and Leah Shapiro (UW, 2020)
Jewop A Capella - a student group supported by UW Hillel, a beneficiary organization of JFM

UW-Madison's culturally Jewish a cappella group, Jewop, qualified for the National Collegiate Jewish A Cappella Competition, Kol HaOlam, held at Adas Israel Congregation in Washington D.C. on March 2nd. In November, they put together an audition video including one song entirely in Hebrew and one song that relates to Judaism. In December, Jewop was admitted to the competition along with 7 other groups from around the country.

The a cappella group traveled to D.C. on the Thursday prior to the competition and participated in Shabbat festivities with the host synagogue on Friday and Saturday. During Shabbat, Jewop broke Challah bread with the other a cappella groups competing as well as members of the host synagogue. Many of the Adas Israel congregation members said they always look forward to the weekend of Kol HaOlam because they're excited to meet all the groups and listen to their music. Some of them were excited to root for their Alma Maters, too.

On Saturday evening, the groups were briefed on how the rules have changed from previous years: This year, there would be two rounds. In the first round, each group must sing a song entirely in Hebrew. The judges grade them on pronunciation, sound quality, and performance quality. The judges are often high profile members of the Cantorial Assembly or members of professional Jewish a cappella groups like the Maccabeats. As Jewop's first song, they performed "Milim", a powerful song most recognized as Israel's Eurovision entry in 2010. After the first round, only the top four groups would move on to the second round.

Each a cappella group worked for two months on their songs. So, each group worried that they would not get the chance to perform the second song they prepared. After an intermission where each group sat at the edges of their seats, the judges announced the four groups to advance: Mezumenets from the University of Maryland, ShireiNU from Northwestern University, HooShir from Indiana University, and Jewop from University of Wisconsin.

Jewop performed "Better than Today" as their second song, an original arrangement about the importance of giving back to the community in Judaism. The song touched on concepts including Tzedakah, Gimelut Chassadim, and Tikkun Olam.

In the end, Jewop took home 2nd place, but they also took home a wealth of fun, enlightening, and educational experiences. The level of competition at Kol HaOlam is high, but as Madison Knobloch, the music director of Jewop said, "The competition pushes us to learn more about music and even more about Judaism." Jewop patiently awaits their next opportunity to compete in this competition, motivated to improve their group, their sound, and their performance.

Jewop performs around the Madison area throughout the semester and puts on a show on campus at the end of every semester. You can find them on Facebook, Instagram, and YouTube as Jewop A Cappella.

Madison's First Freedom Seder

50 years ago, a group of Jewish Americans and African-Americans got together to remember Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. with a Passover Seder that included new readings connecting the Jewish exodus from Egypt with the struggle for Civil Rights in America and Social Justice around the world. This year, on April 14th, the African American/Jewish Friendship Group hosted Madison's first Freedom Seder to honor the 50th anniversary of this original gathering in Washington D.C. The Passover service was organized by the group's founders, Jerry and Merle Sternberg, and included a multi-course Passover meal that was a mix of African-American and Jewish dishes, traditional Haggadah selections, and readings highlighting the African American experience and connections with the Exodus story.

"The Freedom Seder is bringing together African-American and Jewish people with the idea that the African-American people have suffered 400 years of slavery in our country, and the Jewish people suffered 400 years of slavery in Egypt," Jerry Sternberg said. "We have so much in common to be celebrating. The Freedom Seder is celebrated a little different from a traditional Jewish Seder, but we have both cultures there, along with food from both cultures."

By Ellen Wiesmer, Director of Camp Shalom
A Program of Jewish Federation of Madison

MESSAGE FROM MADISON JEWISH NEWS
We hope you enjoy reading the Madison Jewish News! We know it's an important resource for keeping informed and up-to-date on happenings and events in the Madison Jewish community. You may notice this month's issue is a littler smaller than usual. We're currently in a period of transition and reorganization, which includes working on a needs assessment for the paper. In order to give us the capacity to explore how we can best serve the community, the next few MJN issues will be smaller in page count and may not be running certain content. We look forward to working collaboratively with you on this process.

The Eurovision is coming to Israel

By Shlomit Ezer, Jewish Federation of Madison Shlicha and Tal Shefer, Jewish Federation of Madison Campus Shaliach

While it may not be a famous or even a known thing in the US, the Eurovision song contest is very big in Europe, and also in Israel. For those of you who are not familiar with what Eurovision is, it is an annual international song competition, held primarily among European countries. Each participating country sends a representative to perform live at the contest, which is being broadcasted live worldwide. People from the participating countries can then vote for their favorite song, but cannot vote for their own country's song. This year, forty-one countries will be competing in the contest, and Israel is one of them.

This year's Eurovision is special to us since it will be held in Tel-Aviv on Saturday, May 18, after winning last year's contest with the song Toy by Netta Barzilay. It was the fourth time Israel has won the Eurovision, after also winning first place in 1978, 1979, and 1998.

For the past years, the Israeli representative for the Eurovision is the winner of the Israeli version for "American Idol", and this year's winner is Kobi Marimi, who will be singing a song called "Home".

As always, we will be watching the contest, cheering for Israel and hoping to win once again. Hope you will watch it and enjoy it as well.
