

"I included OJCS in my Legacy giving, because I believe that Jewish Day Schools have a unique role to play in Jewish Education and in maintaining continuity from generation to generation, l'dor va dor. I did go to a Jewish Day School myself, and still remember all the pearls I learnt in the few years I was able to attend, before WWII intervened and the school was closed down. I loved that environment and the Shabbat morning services as well as the "stories from the Torah" that our principal ran in place of direct Torah reading, and the lessons each reading taught. My children as well attended Hillel Academy and I like what I saw in the evolution from those days to OJCS. Proper Jewish education is invaluable on so many counts: social, ethical, universal."
