Why Erin Molan is Captivating Audiences

Erin Molan is an Australian TV and Radio presenter, former host of the prime time show, 'Erin' on Sky News, and former columnist for the Daily Telegraph. She spent over a decade as a sports and news presenter on Channel 9, including as the first female to host the NRL Footy Show and 2GBs Continuous Call Team.

She is passionate about politics, national security and foreign affairs plus uses her platform to support countless charities to fulfill her personal mission to make sure all women and children have a peaceful and flourishing future. In the wake of the October 7th attacks on Israel, Erin emerged as a powerful voice, unflinchingly calling for action and supporting Israel and the Jewish community. Her own experience with online abuse led to her advocacy for new laws to protect Australians online. The 'Online Safety Act' or 'Erin's Law', as former Prime Minister Scott Morrison refers to it, was passed in Parliament in 2021. In 2024, she vulnerably shared the horrific domestic violence she had experienced at the hands of a past partner. The harrowing account placed important attention on the shame that domestic abuse survivors may feel. While she kept quiet about her story, she realized "(If other women know) I've been there, (and it) makes someone feel a little bit less ashamed — because you feel ashamed, you feel like you're too weak to fight it, or too weak to escape...I just thought, if I can share my story and one woman says, 'You know what, I can do this. I can ask for help. I can get out and you can (too)."'

Erin travels the world sharing her story of persistence, resilience, failure and always 'fronting up' regardless of what's thrown her way... plus ensuring negative experiences become a catalyst for change... always with a laugh along the way!

Erin has competed in the world's most dangerous open ocean race, The
