

I love Temple for our people - and how much I learn with and from them. From our Rabbis of course but not only our spiritual leaders. At Temple, we come together with shared Jewish values. When we choose to explore our beliefs or to work together on common causes like refugee settlement, indigenous reconciliation, building renewal, I love the connections I feel.

I am always impressed by what people bring to these diverse challenges. Temple is a place where people feel comfortable sharing themselves and this openness helps us take risks together and learn from each other. I am proud of what we tackle and achieve together.

Volunteering is an important part of my life and Temple is a great place to invest my volunteer effort – when we find ways to build and contribute we are better people and our community is stronger. Making a legacy gift is another way to build our community and ensure future opportunities for people to come together, learn, contribute and support one another.
