BINGHAMTON, NEW YORK

Save the date: October 27 is Super Sunday

The Jewish Federation of Greater Binghamton will hold Super Sunday on Sunday, October 27, at 10 am, at the Jewish Community Center, 500 Clubhouse Rd., Vestal.

The event will kick-off the 2020

Campaign and will feature a brunch. The theme for this year's Campaign is "A New Beginning – a Legacy of Caring." During the event, former Federation Executive Director Sima Auerbach will receive a Yasher Koach award for her work for the Federation. The event will also introduce the new Spirit of the Community awards.

"Join us for a wonderful morning as we prepare for the upcoming year," said Shelley Hubal, Federation's executive director. "We plan to carry forward the legacy of caring that has symbolized our Jewish community and find our place in the 21st century."

There will be a $10 charge for the event. For more information about Super Sunday, see future issues of The Reporter.

Pauline and Philip M. Piaker Lecture to feature Rabbi Joseph Telushkin on Sept. 23 at the JCC

Reservations are currently being accepted for the Annual Pauline and Philip M. Piaker Lecture to be held on Monday, September 23, beginning 7:15 pm, at the Jewish Community Center in Vestal. The evening, titled "One People, One Heart," will feature guest speaker Rabbi Joseph Telushkin, who will address "five lessons from the Rebbe that can change your life today." The evening is co-sponsored by the Jewish Federation of Greater Binghamton and the Jewish Community Center. The event is open to the community free of charge, but reservations are necessary and can be made at www.jewishbu.com/piaker or by calling Chabad at 797-0015. A dessert reception and book signing will follow the lecture.

Telushkin is the author of 16 books on Judaism. In 2014, Telushkin released "Rebbe: The Life and Teachings of Menachem M. Schneerson, the Most Influential Rabbi in Modern History," which appeared on all of the major bestseller lists, including the New York Times Best Seller list, Wall Street Journal and Publishers Weekly.

Telushkin's book "Words That Hurt, Words That Heal" inspired Senators Joseph Lieberman's and Connie Mack's Senate Resolution 151 to establish a National Speak No Evil Day in the U.S., a day that would encourage Americans to go for 24 hours without saying anything unkind or unfair about, or to, anyone. His book "Jewish Literacy: The Most Important Things to Know About the Jewish Religion, Its People and Its History" is one of the best-selling books on Judaism of the past two decades and remains a foundation text for Jews, non-Jews and prospective converts alike.

"This year, we are honored to be able to bring Rabbi Joseph Telushkin to Binghamton to speak at the Piaker Memorial Lecture," stated Alan Piaker on behalf of See "Piaker" on page 7

JFS seeks donations for We Remember You project

Jewish Family Service is preparing for the distribution of food baskets for the We Remember You project. The project, which is now in its 12th year, supports Jewish families locally who struggle to make ends meet.

As in the past, supermarkets and businesses will donate food to be distributed. JFS is seeking community members to make monetary donations that will be given out along with the food baskets. Those interested should send their tax deductible donation to JFS by Tuesday, September 17; checks should have "We Remember You" on the memo line and can be mailed to 500 Clubhouse Rd., Vestal, 13850.

"The We Remember You Project is a wonderful way to give tzedakah during this time of self-reflection and gratitude," noted Shelley Hubal, the Jewish Federation executive director. "The Binghamton community has always been compassionate and generous. This is just another way to show our neighbors they are not forgotten

CJS fall 2019 program: "Antisemitism Then and Now"

"Antisemitism and the Politics of Jewish Peoplehood"

The third and final lecture of the fall 2019 College of Jewish Studies series on "Antisemitism, Then and Now" will be held on Thursday, September 19, when Dr. Yehuda Kurtzer, president of the Shalom Hartman Institute of North America, will present a lecture titled "Antisemitism and the Politics of Jewish Peoplehood." Kurtzer's talk will focus on today's "complex and sometimes troubled" relationship between Israel and Diaspora communities (particularly American Jewry), exploring the ways in which antisemitic discourse has sought to exploit these divides.

Kurtzer received his M.A. from Brown University and Ph.D. in Jewish studies from Harvard University. He served on the faculty of Brandeis University and held the inaugural chair in Jewish Communal Innovation there. In 2010, he helped create the Hartman Institute of North America as a research and educational center dedicated to exploring the relationship between Israel and the Diaspora. Kurtzer is the author of "Shuva: The Future of the Jewish Past" and the co-editor of the forthcoming volume "The New Jewish Canon," a collection of what are considered the most significant Jewish ideas and debates of the past two generations.

College of Jewish Studies programs are open to the entire community; general admission is $8 per program, or $20 for all three programs; senior admission is $5 per program or $12 for all three programs. BU students are welcome to attend at no charge. All programs begin at 7:30 pm at the Jewish Community Center, 500 Clubhouse Rd., Vestal.

Spotlight

Rap, Judaism and social justice

By Rabbi Rachel Esserman

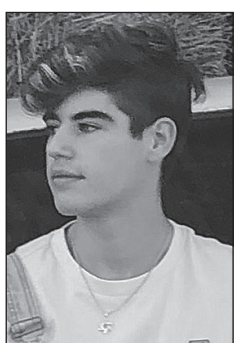

Some people believe college-aged students are apathetic about politics – more interested in their phones and social media than they are in social justice. That's not true for Jonathan Shapiro, the son of Julie and Jared Shapiro of Vestal. Shapiro, who recently began college at the University of Rochester, sees his interest in social justice as part of his Jewish heritage. It also represents how he views the world.

His concern about tikkun olam (repairing the world) began early. "My interest in social justice was engraved in me from a young age," he said in an e-mail interview. "Being raised in a Jewish community [meant that] social justice was always a priority in those around me. Almost everyone I looked up to from my childhood had great awareness for social issues and it was just natural for me to take that path, as well."

His interest in rap music began around the time of his bar mitzvah. "In late seventh grade, actually around the time of my bar mitzvah, I began creating rap music," Shapiro said. "After I broke my back, I was out from soccer and my brother introduced me to the genre and I instantly fell in love. Also, writing raps and poetry was a very therapeutic activity for me in any time of stress."

One example of social justice and rap

can be found in his rap "Driving." Shapiro noted that "[Driving] is a story told from the perspective of a mother whose son, Derick, was tragically lost due to a drinking and driving incident. On one hand, the message is to spread awareness against drinking and driving, but it also ends on a positive note with the mother feeling empowered and ready to make a change. At the end the mother says, 'I ain't taking life for granted. I ain't living to exist. I know I'm here to make a difference show the world what Derick wished.' This song's message is to express that life has tragedy, but it's what you do to stop the next tragedy that matters."

Other songs hit closer to home. "One of my personal favorite songs off of my debut project 'Nightmares Are Still Dreams' is 'Mistakes,'" he said. "This song is about battling depression and longing for purpose. This song is very personal, but hopefully lots of others can relate."

Shapiro writes both rap and poetry, and his decision about which format to use is based on whether or not the idea has a beat. "If I need to get something off my chest or have a good idea and don't have a beat I will write a poem instead of a rap," he said. During his senior year at Vestal High See "Rap" on page 7

Beth David Luncheon speaker on Sept. 14 to discuss Mediterranean diet and the Bible

On Saturday, September 14, Beth David will kick off its monthly luncheon speaker series with a talk by Dr. Erin Maxfield titled "A Land Flowing with Milk and Honey: Health Benefits of a Mediterranean Diet." She will discuss how the science behind the benefits of a Mediterranean diet relates to the Bible's and Judaism's focus on health. Maxfield completed the flagship HEALTH meets FOOD™ year-long culinary medicine course at Arnot Ogden Medical Center in Elmira, NY, a teaching kitchen developed by Tulane University's School of Medicine Goldring Center for Culinary Medicine. Designed to foster an integrative mindset, the program enables physicians to gain hands-on knowledge that they can share with their communities about ways to improve health by following a relatively low-cost Mediterranean diet-based plan.

"In the Bible," Maxfield says, "what is good for the soul frequently is also good for the body. My talk will focus on the importance of health in Judaism as well as characteristics unique to the western Fertile Crescent region, which has been mentioned in Jewish Scriptures as constituting the 'ideal' environment for human habitation. I will do this by sharing information from mainstream scientific and medical studies of the benefits of a nutrition plan based on a Mediterranean diet."

A graduate of the University of Texas at Arlington, where she received a bachelor's degree with honors in chemistry, Maxfield earned her medical degree from Lake Erie College of Osteopathic Medicine. She has also completed an elective postdoctoral fellowship in neuropathology at Case Western Reserve University School of Medicine in Cleveland, where she was also an adjunct professor. In 2018, she relocated to New York to begin her medical residency training. She is currently a second-year family medicine resident physician with Ascension Health in Binghamton.

"We are delighted to have Erin share the wealth of her knowledge with us, particularly as a means of seeing how mainstream science supports what we find in the Bible about healthy eating," organizers say. "As those who have attended previous luncheon series meals know, Judy Silber has a special talent for coordinating the luncheon menu with the topic of the monthly talks, so we are in for a special treat, both intellectually and gastronomically!"

Beth David's luncheon speaker series takes place the second Saturday of the month, after Shabbat morning services, and is open to the community. There is no charge for the luncheon. Since the monthly series' continuation depends on the generosity of contributors, Beth David welcomes donations to the Luncheon Fund in order to keep the program going. Donations can be made in honor of or in memory of someone, or to mark a special occasion. Those wishing an acknowledgment to be sent to the person being honored, or to the family of someone being remembered, can indicate that, along with the necessary information. Donations can be sent to Beth David Synagogue, 39 Riverside Dr., Binghamton, NY 13905, Attention: Luncheon Fund.

Interfaith panel on Sept. 22

Rabbi Barbara Goldman-Wartell, Reverend Dr. Michelle Bogue-Trost and Imam Adnan Ahmed will participate in an interfaith panel on peace and acceptance on Sunday, September 22, from 2-4 pm, at Central United Methodist Church, 17 Nanticoke Ave., Endicott.

The program is organized by Central United Methodist Church, All Saints Episcopal Church, St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Temple Concord and Ahmadiyya Muslim Community.

From the Desk of the Federation Executive Director

With gratitude

SHELLEY HUBAL

Have you ever witnessed a moment of pure joy and wonder? Recently, as I walked through the Jewish Community Center lobby, I had the good fortune to witness such an instance. A beautiful little preschool student, no more than 2 years old, made a small detour on her way to the gym. As her class was lining up, she walked over to one of the large glass front doors and pressed her entire body to its smooth surface. She stayed there for several seconds, fully committed to the experience, with her face, hands and belly held against the glass in a moment of pure wonder and sensory bliss. I could see her young mind absorbing the experience, truly alive and so focused on learning something new about the world. Seconds later, as she skipped away to join her class with big smile on her face, I could not help but share in her joy.

I share this story because it touched me. It was a beautiful, magical and fleeting moment. I am grateful to have witnessed it. It lightened my heart and I will hold on to these feelings for a long time. As Rosh Hashanah approaches, and we are reflecting on the past and looking toward the future, my prayer for all of you in this community is that you will experience joy, peace and wonder. We all have a choice what we pick up and hold close to our hearts. I hope you have many experiences in this coming year that keep you whole, that push you to experience the wonder all around you and make you skip a little faster. Shanah tovah from the Jewish Federation of Greater Binghamton.

In My Own Words

A couple of things

RABBI RACHEL ESSERMAN, EXECUTIVE EDITOR

Grace and Jane

Imagine a world where it's considered funny to call women "Cute Chick" and "Fat Broad." Those of us who grew up with the comic strip "B.C." know that, while all the men in the strip were given names, the women were referenced only by their looks. Since this is ancient history, you may be wondering why I'm writing about it. Well, The Reporter received a publicity release stating that "Cute Chick" and "Fat Broad" have been renamed: they are now called Grace and Jane.

Since Johnny Hart, the originator of the strip died, it's been drawn and written by his grandsons. I like it much more than I did the original strip. (I also like his grandsons' other strip, "Dogs of C-Kennel.") My previous disinterest in the strip was not because of its periodic very Christian offering (it was Johnny Hart's comic so I was OK with him expressing his values), but because the jokes didn't always make sense. After learning from someone whose husband was friends with Hart that the strips contained in-jokes that only members of their men's service group would get, I stopped bothering to try to figure them out.

I could be cynical and say that the only reason for the name change is because "B.C." is being made into a movie. (They really can't call women "Cute Chick" and "Fat Broad" on the big screen nowadays.) However, the strip has long stopped using those names for them. It just never picked new ones. The press release also noted that its current creators realized these names were pejorative. I, for one, am glad to see that, at least in the comic strip world, some women are being treated as human beings rather than objects.

LUMA

I've not attended the LUMA Projection Arts Festival. I'm not that fond of crowds and I can't stand for long periods of time. I also worry about the noise: music can easily become too loud for me and even voices over loudspeakers are often unpleasant to hear. However, I know people who love the event and look forward to it every year. It's also considered a big draw for downtown Binghamton. I imagine that restaurants and other businesses do well during the festival.

I had not considered the effect the festival might have on the people who live in the area. The Press And Sun-Bulletin recently published a column by a veteran with PTSD who lives in a nearby, low income apartment building. He told not only of the problems it causes due to his PTSD, but the tinnitus that some people who live in the building are still suffering from after last year's festival.

I can't talk about PTSD because I fortunately have not experienced that, but I can talk about tinnitus, which is also known as ringing in the ear. To be blunt: it's awful. Just think of a horrible noise you can't stand and then imagine hearing that 24/7 with no way to escape. When mine acts up, I often can hear two or three different sounds at the same time. It makes it hard to sleep and concentrate. It also sets your nerves on edge. There aren't words to tell you how grateful I am that my cochlear implant and my hearing aids give me relief during the day from that terrible noise.

It's too late to do anything this year, but I'm hoping that someone connected to the festival will take note of the problem and try to help those people who can't afford to leave their apartments or are too disabled to find another place to stay. Perhaps the volume of the music can be turned down. That would save everyone's ears since loud noise causes a great deal of damage to people's hearing. There must be a way to keep the festival and provide relief for those who live nearby.

Federation to hold Day of Caring on Sept. 15

The Jewish Federation of Greater Binghamton will hold a Day of Caring on Sunday, September 15, beginning at 9:30 am. Volunteers, led by Charles Manasse, will clean overgrown grave-stones in Section D of the Temple Israel Cemetery in Conklin.

A section of land situated at the northwest corner of the Temple Israel Cemetery was set aside in the early 20th century for the burial of impoverished deceased members of the Binghamton area's Jewish community. These graves are marked by stones approximately six inches square, laid out in a grid. Over many decades, these graves have fallen into a state of neglect and disrepair, ers that had fallen into disrepair. Manasse led a group of Federation volunteers who worked to restore the site with an aim to honor the memory of the dead.

At the conclusion of the work on September 15, there will be a formal rededication for the renewed status of Section D and its new boundary. The dedication will be led by Rabbi Geoffrey Brown, the spiritual leader of Temple Israel.

Anyone with questions or who is interested in helping should call the Federation at 724-2332. Volunteers are needed and are encouraged to bring garden tools, such as landscape rakes, spades, shovels, gloves and trowels.

In the fall of 2018, the Federation undertook a project to uncover, reset, even out and clean many of the grave mark-

Hand in Hand co-founder Lee Gordon to speak in Ithaca

The Ithaca Area United Jewish Community, in cooperation with Congregation Tikkun v'Or, will host Lee Gordon for a presentation on Sunday, September 22, at 7 pm, at Tikkun v'Or, 2550 Triphammer Rd., Lansing. The event is free and open to the public.

The following day, Monday, September 23, Gordon will speak to students at Lehman Alternative Community School in the morning, and then make another public appearance, hosted by Ithaca College Hillel, at noon. The Ithaca College presentation is open to the public and will be in the Taughannock Falls Room, Ithaca College Campus Center, 201 Egbert Hall.

Gordon is co-founder of Hand in Hand: Center for Jewish-Arab Education in Israel, an Israeli non-profit organization that has created a network of integrated public schools serving Arab and Jewish children. Starting with just 50 students in 1998, Hand in Hand now has six campuses and more than 1,850 Jewish and Arab students attending, and is making a growing impact in Israel for Jewish-Arab partnership and coexistence.

Gordon is a native of Portland, OR, and lived for 20 years in Israel, where he received a master's degree in social work from Hebrew University and graduated from the Mandel Institute's School for Educational Leadership. His years of involvement in the peace movement in Israel, as well as Jewish-Arab and Israeli-Palestinian dialogue work, propelled him to establish Hand in Hand and, in 1999, to create American Friends of Hand in Hand, a non-profit American organization supporting the organization's work in Israel, of which Gordon serves as executive director.

Lecture on "The Synagogue and the Study House" at Cornell U.

On Thursday, September 19, at 4:30 pm, in Goldwin Smith Hall's Lewis Auditorium at Cornell University, Professor Olga Litvak will explore the "dynamic relationship" between two institutions that have shaped Jewish history from late antiquity to the present day in a lecture on "The Synagogue and the Study House." A reception in the Groos Family Atrium, Klarman Hall, will follow the lecture.

The bricks and mortar of Jewish experience, the Jewish "house of commons" (beit-knesset) and the Jewish "university" (beit-hamidrash) stake out different, not always complementary, and often competitive, styles of thought and social discipline. Focusing on several "exemplary moments" in the making of Jewish past, Litvak will address the ways in which these "distinctive forms of Jewish life defined the content of belief and behavior."

The lecture is sponsored by the Cornell Jewish Studies Program. More information is available at jewishstudies.cornell.edu.

TC High Holiday child care

Free High Holiday child care will be offered by Temple Concord Sisterhood for youngsters ages 2 to kindergarten while parents and grandparents attend services at Temple Concord the morning of Rosh Hashanah, Monday, September 30, and the morning of Yom Kippur, Wednesday, October 9.

Off the Shelf

Translating the Bible

RABBI RACHEL ESSERMAN

Someone once asked me how best to understand the Bible if they were unable to read the original Hebrew. I gave them the advice I'd received years earlier: read two or three different translations and note when they disagree or use a different expression. That signals a problematic word or phrase. However, even multiple translations cannot capture all the nuances of the text. Robert Alter writes about his attempt to overcome these difficulties in his new work "The Art of Bible Translation" (Princeton University Press). In it, he discusses the problems that arise when a translator tries to match the syntax, rhythm, word play and other literary aspects of the Hebrew Bible.

Alter, who recently published a new translation of the Tanach (the complete Hebrew Bible), was previously best-known for two books used in many rabbinical school and Judaic studies classes: "The Art of Biblical Narrative" and "The Art of Biblical Poetry." Where Alter differs from many who translate the Bible is that his original specialty was comparative literature. In fact, as he notes in his introduction, he never planned to focus on translation. While he did have an interest in the Bible, he believed he would return to the study of comparative literature and publish works in that field. It is this literary background that makes his translation different. Alter notes that "the literary style of the Bible in both prose narrative and poetry is not some sort of aesthetic embellishment of the 'message' of Scripture but the vital medium through which the biblical vision of God, human nature, history, politics, society, and moral value is conveyed." The way the words are used – from the word order to the specific word chosen – makes a difference in how the text should be understood.

Jewish Studies Program at Ithaca College lecture by author David Lehman on Sept. 16

On Monday, September 16, at 7:30 pm, in Textor 101 on the Ithaca College campus, author David Lehman will present "A Fine Romance: Jewish Songwriters, American Songs." He will talk about the Jewish songwriters who created America's popular and Broadway music from the 1920s to the 1960s, known as the "Great American Songbook."

David Lehman

Many jazz standards and probably a majority of the songs in the "Great American Songbook" were written by Jewish composers and lyricists. They, or their parents, escaped persecution in Eastern Europe, emigrated to the United States, and wrote musical odes to love, romance, show biz and the American dream. To take one example: Russian-born Irving Berlin, the son of a cantor, wrote "God Bless America," "There's No Business Like Show Business" and "White Christmas" – the best-selling song of all time, which secularizes that holiday – in addition to many of the songs to which Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers danced.

In his talk, Lehman will raise and address questions such as: What is Jewish about the songs written by Berlin, the Gershwins, Rodgers and Hart, Harold Arlen, Jerome Kern, Leonard Bernstein, Dorothy Fields, Yip Harburg, Frank Loesser and many others? Who were they and what are their chief contributions? What did the non-Jewish Cole Porter mean when he said that the secret of writing hits was to "write Jewish tunes"? What are some of the characteristics of songs such as "Ol' Man River," "My Funny Valentine," "Diamonds Are a Girl's Best Friend," "That's Entertainment," "But Not For Me" and "Over the Rainbow"? What did the Jewish songwriters borrow from – and lend to – African-American musicians, as well as Italian-American crooners?

Lehman is the author of "A Fine Romance: Jewish Songwriters, American Songs," which won the Deems Taylor Award from the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers in 2010. (The Reporter's review of "A Fine Romance: Jewish Songwriters, American Songs" can be found at www.thereporter.org/Article.aspx?aID=1125.) He also curated, designed and wrote an exhibit of the same name that traveled to 55 libraries in 27 states. Lehman's other nonfiction books include "Sinatra's Century: One Hundred Notes on the Man and His World" and "One Hundred Autobiographies: A Memoir," which Cornell University Press is publishing this October. A poet, Lehman has published 10 books of poetry (most recently "Playlist" in April). He is the editor of "The Oxford Book of American Poetry" and series editor of "The Best American Poetry," the annual anthology he founded in 1988. Lehman divides his time between New York City and Ithaca.

The lecture is sponsored by Ithaca College's Jewish Studies Program and is free and open to the public. Bible.Continued from page 4

Alter believes that the problem with many modern translations is because they are written by scholars in Judaic Studies Departments who, while they may know a great deal about biblical times, have no background in literature. This means they often fail to understand how the nuances of the language can change the meaning of a phrase or sentence. According to Alter, modern translators are looking for clarity – to make a text easy to understand – when the biblical text itself is doing the opposite. For example, Alter notes that "the Hebrew writers reveled in the proliferation of meanings, [and] the cultivation of ambiguities, the playing of one sense of a term against another." That means the richness of the text is missing in most translations. Alter explains times when even his translation can't capture the richness of the original text because there is no word in English that can duplicate the meaning of the Hebrew one, or when a short three-word phrase in Hebrew can only be translated into English using eight words, which throws off the rhythm of the text.

One example of this can be found in Alter's discussion of how the text creates drama by the specific order of words. This occurs when God tells Abraham he is to sacrifice his son Isaac. The Hebrew sequence of the words in Alter's translation is, "Take, pray, your son, your only one, whom you love, Isaac." He then quotes three modern translations that reorder the sequence, placing Isaac's name closer to the beginning of the quote. For Alter, the power of the statement is lost: "It is painfully clear that each [modern version] aims to make the Hebrew sound a lot more like 'natural' modern usage and also seeks to make it somehow more compact. The lamentable result is to erase an important effect inscribed in the word order of the Hebrew." In the original Hebrew text and in Alter's translation, Abraham does not know which son he is being asked to sacrifice until the end of the sentence.

Biblical poetry presents additional problems. Pronouns are often added to verbs and nouns, although three or more words may be needed in English. In addition, the present tense of the verb "to be" does not exist in Hebrew. This greatly affects how a poem sounds when translated. For example, Alter notes that, in Psalm 23, "the five words of the 'the Lord is my shepherd' represent just two in Hebrew, Yahweh ro'i, and there is no way of getting across this particular compactness in Hebrew in English."

An additional problem can arise when the biblical text contains a literary technique Alter calls fronting. Fronting occurs when the most important word – the main emphasis – is placed at the beginning of a sentence in Hebrew. For example, Alter translates Genesis 18:10 as, "Look, a son shall Sarah your wife have." Most translations he quotes place Sarah first and move the word son until the end of the sentence. However, Alter suggests that "it is surely important that God's speech places that impossible, frequently desired thing, a son, at the beginning of the verse." The text wants to emphasize the word son, not the name Sarah.

Alter notes that no translation is perfect, including his own. However, his comments on different translations and why he chose specific words for his own makes "The Art of Bible Translation" interesting reading. This short work (only 121 pages of text, not including a list of suggested reading and the index) manages to pack a great deal of material into its pages. Although some knowledge of the Bible is helpful, an understanding of Hebrew is not because Alter's transliterations and explanations are clear and relatively easy to understand. Those interested in literary translation or the meaning of the Bible will enjoy discussing, and arguing about, the choices he made.

JFS-Federation to host seminar on "Wills and Estate Planning"

Jewish Family Service and the Jewish Federation of Greater Binghamton will host a free seminar on "Wills and Estate Planning" on Monday, September 16, starting at 6 pm.

The speaker, Alycia Kimmel, is an associate attorney at Levene Gouldin and Thompson who practices in the areas of trusts and estates, elder law and real estate. The event will be held at the Jewish Community Center, 500 Clubhouse Rd., Vestal.

"Will and estate planning are something many people put off because they don't want to think about it," said Rose

Shea, director of Jewish Family Service. "But doing this correctly can make a big difference in making sure your wishes are carried out. Part of JFS's mission is to help people plan for the future."

"Join us for what will be an interesting and informative event," said Shelley Hubal, executive director of the Federation. "I'm looking forward to learning more about planning for the future."

To register, call the Federation office at 724-2332 or e-mail Hubal at director@jfgb.org.

Weekly Parasha

Ki Tetze, Deuteronomy 21:10-25:19

Our covenantal responsibility

RABBI BARBARA GOLDMAN-WARTELL, TEMPLE CONCORD

Parasha Ki Tetze is part of Moses' last effort to inculcate the ways of Torah in the new generation of Israelites who were born in the wilderness and would enter the Promised Land with Joshua at the lead. Moses tries many ways to impress upon the Israelites how they are to conduct themselves as they enter the Promised Land. Throughout the book of Deuteronomy, he speaks to them about the entirety of Jewish history and continuity, and our covenantal responsibility toward one another and with God.

This week's Torah portion contains 72 mitzvot, more than any other Torah portion. The core of these mitzvot is Deuteronomy 22:3: "You shall not remain indifferent." Taken together with Hillel's Golden Rule, "what is hateful to you, do not do to another," the two offer compelling reasons to be concerned and actively intervene when others are in pain, suffering or being treated unjustly. This includes helping animals who have fallen on the road. We are also taught not to abuse the needy and destitute laborer, irrespective of whether the person is a fellow citizen or a foreign worker. Deuteronomy 24:15 instructs us to pay the person on the same day they work because the person is needy and urgently depends on it.

These mitzvot are important for us to heed today when we may feel emotionally overloaded with the problems of our world. We are commanded not to be indifferent, we are commanded not to turn away and we are commanded to act to help others. Images of suffering from times past echo in the suffering we witness today by those without resources – those far away from their homes and suffering from unspeakable traumas. As we learn more See "Our" on page 7

Nigerian youth participate in first Jewish leadership seminar

By JNS staff

(JNS) – More than 250 Nigerian youth and 20 adults gathered in Onithsa from August 18-25 for a national week-long Jewish leadership and learning seminar organized by the Jerusalem-based Shavei Israel organization, activist and educator Danny Limor, and the Nigerian Jewish Youth Movement. The seminar included classes in Hebrew and Torah, lectures, Shabbat activities, singing and dancing.

The Igbo are one of Nigeria's largest ethnic groups, and among them is a minority of some 4,000 people practicing Judaism and defining themselves as the descendants of a lost tribe of Israel. About 70 Igbo Jewish communities are scattered throughout in Nigeria, founded at different times and under various circumstances, but the first and biggest Jewish community in Lagos has existed for more than 20 years. Most of the communities have at least one place of study or synagogue where members gather for daily and Shabbat services.

"In recent years, a growing number of Igbo in Nigeria have chosen to embrace Judaism and seek to learn more about the culture, faith, heritage of Israel and the Jewish people," said Shavei Israel founder and Chairman Michael Freund. "We decided to answer their call, and we're working closely with the Igbo Jewish communities that are now flourishing in places such as Lagos, Abuja and Anambra state."

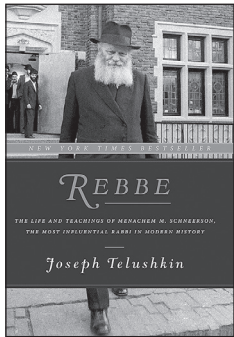

Shavei Israel is providing these communities with training programs for young leaders, seminars on Jewish belief and practice, religious items, and other guidance and support. Its emissary to Nigeria, Gadi Bentley, also took part in the recent seminar.

his siblings. "A prolific writer and best-selling author, Rabbi Telushkin has written several of his books on Jewish ethics, a topic very dear to my parents. As a professor at Binghamton University, my father published a number of articles on ethics as it related to accounting, and his readings on Jewish ethics profoundly influenced his career as a professor of accounting and as a CPA. Please join us in welcoming Rabbi Telushkin to our community and to experience an evening of Jewish learning from this dynamic speaker!"

The cover of Telushkin's book "Rebbe: The Life and Teachings of Menachem M. Schneerson, the Most Influential Rabbi in Modern History"

Telushkin tours the United States as a lecturer on Jewish topics. He has been named by Talk Magazine as one of the 50 best speakers in the United States. He has been on the Newsweek list of the 50 most influential rabbis in America since 1997. He wrote the episode "Bar Mitzvah" on the television show "Touched by an Angel," guest-starring Kirk Douglas. Telushkin was ordained at Yeshiva University in New York and pursued graduate studies in history at Columbia University. He resides in New York City with his wife, Dvora Menashe Telushkin. They are the parents of four children.

JCC Friendship Club

The JCC Friendship Club met on September 4 and saw half the video of "A Beautiful Mind." It is about the adult life of John Nash, a mathematical genius who is still living in the U.S. He helped solve problems and codes during World War II. It starts when he was entering Princeton University to earn his doctorate. He did not socialize as his other classmates did, but he was very blunt. He told one of the men he was introduced to that his necktie was "mathematically ugly." We stopped the video when a man from the FBI approached Dr. Nash and requested that he help them solve coded messages sent by the enemy. We will see the rest of the video next week.

Sylvia Diamond read the book and knows the story about his life before Princeton University. The reason she read the book was because her grandson was able to understand the equations in the book, which most of us can't understand. Unfortunately, her grandson died at 21 years of age and did not achieve the level of John Nash. Thanks to Bruce Orden for bringing his equipment to show the video on the screen that the JCC provided.

The meeting was called to order by Sylvia. After the Pledge of Allegiance, Ann Brilliant said the blessing over the cookies. Sylvia brought in New Year's cards for Rosh Hashanah. There should be enough for us to write a message on each one and distribute a card to each resident in nursing facilities and to the home bound. Come join us at the JCC on Wednesday at 1:30 pm.

School, his poem "I am Words" won first place in the Tri-Cities Women's Club Youth and Short Story Contest. That work also deals with social justice: "I am Words" is a poem about the power of words," he said. "It describes how words make up someone's character and can even change the world."

He would love to be able to continue making music, but is realistic about what that would mean. "I really do wish to pursue music as a career," he said. "However, it is a hard career to be successful in. Currently I am... studying international relations while making music in my dorm room. My next step is to maybe take a digital marketing class and learn how to spread my product while I keep creating music."

Shapiro's music is available at <https://soundcloud.com> under the tag Jshaprap. He chose that platform "because it is free and very accessible to anyone looking to listen to music," he said. "In addition, it is very popular among teens."

Editor's note: While some of Shapiro's music is appropriate for all ages, other songs contain profanity.

NEWS IN BRIEF

From JNS.org

Top Treasury official: U.S. will sanction buyers of Iranian oil

The United States will sanction whoever buys Iranian oil, warned the U.S. Treasury Department's top official for countering terrorist financing. "We will continue to put pressure on Iran and as [U.S.] President [Donald Trump] said there will be no waivers of any kind for Iran's oil," U.S. Treasury Under Secretary for Terrorism and Financial Intelligence Sigal Mandelker told reporters on Sept. 8. Iranian crude-oil exports were reduced by more than 80 percent because of the Trump administration reimposing sanctions lifted under the 2015 nuclear deal, which the United States exited in May 2018, along with enacting new financial penalties against the Islamic Republic. On Sept. 8, Iran stated that its oil tanker Adrian Darya 1, which was impounded by the United Kingdom off Gibraltar in July and released in August despite last-minute efforts by the United States to halt its release, has docked somewhere in the Mediterranean and unloaded the ship's oil. The United States blacklisted the tanker in August. The week of Sept. 6, it was reported that the oil tanker, allegedly owned by the IRGC and carrying around 2.1 million barrels of crude oil worth $130 million, switched off its Automatic Identification System, fueling speculation that it was heading toward Syria, which would violate U.S. sanctions against Iran's energy sector.

IAEA: Iran moves toward enriching uranium

Iran has been installing dozens of advanced centrifuges to accelerate uranium enrichment, violating the 2015 nuclear deal, warned the International Atomic Energy Agency on Sept. 9. It represents just the latest Iranian violations of the four-year-old agreement. A centrifuge enriches uranium through spinning uranium hexafluoride gas. Iran is allowed to operate solely 5,060 older IR-1 centrifuges, per the nuclear accord, which also allows the Islamic Republic to have far less advanced centrifuges for research purposes, not to enrich uranium. Over the summer, Iran has vowed to exceed the agreement's limits on research and development. In July, the IAEA confirmed that the regime surpassed the uranium-enrichment limit under the agreement.

Canada to appeal decision that West Bank wines can't be labeled "product of Israel"

The Canadian government announced on Sept. 6 that it will appeal a court ruling from July that stated wine made in Judea and Samaria cannot be labeled a "product of Israel." Shimon Koffler Fogel, CEO of the Centre for Israel and Jewish Affairs, said, "Considering the substantive errors in the earlier judgement and the importance of the outcome of this case, CIJA will be seeking intervenor status in the appeal. We have retained the services of administrative law experts Mark Freiman and Eric Gertner. ...It is our expectation that the Federal Court of Appeal will overturn the lower court's decision. Our position is that the Canadian Food Inspection Agency came to a reasonable decision in accepting the label 'Product of Israel' for wines produced in all the geographical area comprised in the Canada-Israel Free Trade Agreement." CIJA is the advocacy agency of the Jewish Federations of Canada-UIA. The court decision was part of a three-year legal dispute over wine produced by Psagot Winery and Shiloh Winery in the West Bank, reported the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation at the time.

IDF reports failed missile launch from Syria; mysterious explosions rock Syrian militia base

A military base in Syria near the Iraqi border that belongs to an Iran-backed militia was targeted by unidentified warplanes early Sept. 9, killing 18, according to Arab media reports. "Warplanes whose identity is not known so far targeted vehicles and positions of the Iranian forces and militias loyal to them," said the U.K.-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights (or SOHR) according to Saudi news network Al Arabiya. Eighteen fighters died in the attack on the facility, according to SOHR, which also housed members of the Lebanese Shi'ite terrorist group Hezbollah. According to the Israeli military, shortly before the airstrike "Shi'ite militias" under Iranian command attempted to launch several missiles from Syria into Israel. IDF Arabic spokesperson Avichay Adraee also warned that Syrian President Bashar Assad will "pay a heavy price" for his continued assistance to Iran on his country's soil, according to Israel's Ynet news. The airstrikes reportedly took place in the area of a compound Fox News reported on the week of Sept. 6 as being Iran's largest-ever military facility in Syria, still under construction. According to Fox News, Iran is expected to move thousands of troops there once the facility is completed, as well as advanced weaponry such as precision-guided missiles. According to Al Arabiya, said the base struck on Sept. 9 belongs to the Popular Mobilization Forces, an Iraqi state-sponsored umbrella organization founded in 2014 comprising some 40 militias mostly made up of Shi'ite Muslim groups, but also including some Sunnis, Christians and Yazidis who are fighting the Islamic State jihadist organization. The PMF has blamed Israel and the United States for multiple strikes against their arms depots and training camps since July.

IDF strikes Hamas targets in response to armed drone attack from Gaza

Israeli jets hit a Hamas naval-equipment depot and two aerial operations "military centers" on Sept. 7 after an armed drone entered Israeli airspace from the Gaza Strip earlier in the day, according to a statement by the Israel Defense Forces. The cell responsible for launching the drone was also targeted, according to the IDF. "The IDF will continue to act against attempts to harm Israeli citizens, and holds the Palestinian terror group Hamas responsible for everything that takes place in the Gaza Strip and which emanates from there," said the IDF. A military vehicle was lightly damaged in the drone incident, according to the IDF, though it did not reveal whether the drone had detonated. No injuries were reported. The incident marks a "serious uptick" in tensions between Israel and Hamas, which agreed to a tentative ceasefire in May. On Sept. 6, IDF troops clashed with an estimated 6,000 Gaza rioters along the Israeli border in what the IDF called "especially violent" demonstrations. Rioters used firebombs and hand grenades, according to the army, and attempted to destroy and break through the border fence. Two Gazans were reportedly killed in the exchange and more than 70 injured. Hours later, Red Alert sirens were activated in Israeli communities in the western Negev after the IDF detected the launch of five rockets towards Israeli territory. Israel responded with artillery and aircraft attacks on Hamas military attacks in northern Gaza. The reprisals came just hours after Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu warned Hamas that "any attempt to harm our citizens and our soldiers will be met with a forceful response."

ICC judges order review of refusal to investigate Israeli forces over Marmara incident

International Criminal Court appeals judges on Sept. 9 ordered the prosecutor to reconsider her refusal to open an investigation into the 2010 storming of the Mavi Marmara ship, the AP reported. Israeli forces stormed the ship, formerly owned and operated by IDO Istanbul Fast Ferries Co. Inc., when it refused to stop and respect its blockade. Militants on board attacked Israeli soldiers, leading to the deaths of nine of them (one more died later of his wounds). Several dozen militants were claimed to be injured, some seriously, and the Israel Defense Forces reported that 10 of its soldiers were injured, one seriously. Judge Solomy Bossa ordered prosecutor Fatou Bensouda to decide by Dec. 2 whether or not to open a probe. The judges decided the matter in a 3-2 ruling on appeal and criticized Bensouda for rejecting the call by the lower panel of judges to reconsider, according to the report. Israel is not a member of the ICC, but its citizens could be charged in any case.

Local New York GOP branch to re-air controversial ad

An advertisement that many, including the Republican Jewish Coalition, have deemed anti-Semitic against the Chasidic community will be re-aired by the Rockland County GOP in New York, announced the head of the local Republican branch. The video, titled "A Storm Is Coming," blames Chasidic Jews for housing overdevelopment in what is the southernmost county west of the Hudson River - one that boasts a "significant" Jewish population. It includes captions such as "Aaron Wieder [a Jewish Rockland County legislator] and his Ramapo bloc are plotting a takeover." "The Video came down for 2 reasons: first accomplished its goal of highlighting the issues that face our county. And second, took it down because the controversy stopped adding to number one above," said Rockland GOP Chairman Lawrence Garvey in a Facebook post on the Village of South Nyack site, reported The New York Post. "However, the video will be back, because this conversation is important to Rockland," he added. The ad was planned months in advance of its release in August, reported The New York Post. It was condemned as antisemitic, including by the RJC, which tweeted on Aug. 29, "This video is absolutely despicable. It is pure anti-Semitism and should be immediately taken down. The Rockland County Republican Party is an embarrassment and has no place associating itself with our party."
